Dear Mr Johnson

Thank you for your email of 15 March 2017 concerning your Australian innovation, the Jellyfish App. I regret the delay in responding.

I congratulate the Jellyfish App team on their successes since the release of the app in December last year, including its downloading in 61 different countries.

It is heartening to see Australian businesses and researchers collaborating on the development and commercialisation of new and innovative products – and using digital technologies to collate data and deliver information and services to customers in a global market.

I am also pleased to hear of your plans to establish a Jellyfish Foundation with proceeds from the Jellyfish App to provide citizen science project funding and scholarships in marine biology.

I commend the team on their efforts and wish you every success in your future endeavours.

Thank you for writing on this matter.

Yours sincerely
